

CONTENTS

Page

List of Abbreviations	13
List of pictures and tables	15
Chapter 1: Introduction	17
1.1 Purpose of the study and research questions	17
1.2 General and scientific interest of the research	19
1.3 The basic approach of the present study	19
1.4 Structure of the essay	20
PART I – LITERATURE REVIEW	23
Chapter 2: Framing the Context – The Three Research Dimensions	25
2.1 Introduction	25
2.2 National Culture (NCU)	28
a. Definition of National Culture	28
b. Classifications of national cultures	34
2.3 Decision Making Process (DMP)	43
a. The traditional definitions of decision making process	44
b. The social factors related to the business decision making process	51
c. The emotional factors of business decision making process	55
2.4 Company Management Reports (CMRs)	60
a. Definition of Company Management Reports	60
b. Purpose of company management reports	63
c. Classification of company management reports	64
d. Core elements of a company management report	67
e. Principles and rules for an engaging reporting communication	68
2.5 Conclusions	75
Chapter 3: Known interrelations between Decision Making Process, National Culture and Company Management Reports	79
3.1 Introduction	79
3.2 Influence of National Culture on the Decision Making Process	82
a. The impact of national culture on the cerebral process of decision making	82
b. The impact of national culture on the mental process in making decisions	85
c. The impact of national culture on business decisions	91
3.3 Processing the reported information for making decision (DMP/CMR)	93
a. Relation between CMRs and type of decisions	94

b. Relation between CMRs and decision style	97
3.4 Impact of National Culture on the company information management (NCU/CMR)	100
a. Impact of NCU in the individual information management	101
b. Impact of NCU on the individual preference for reporting means	104
c. Impact of NCU on the content of CMRs: the case of managerial accounting	108
3.5 A multidimensional analysis of Italian and German cultures	112
3.5.1 Historical and sociological premises Italian national culture	113
3.5.2 German national culture	116
3.5.3 Italian culture vs. German culture	119
3.6 Conclusions	127
PART II – EMPIRICAL INVESTIGATION	131
Chapter 4: Methodology	133
4.1 Introduction: general methodology and research design	133
4.2 Case Study description	137
4.3 The context: Continental AG – Tyres Division	140
4.4 The case study object: Sales Information System Markis2	142
4.5 The units of analysis: sampling procedure	143
4.6. Data Collection methods	147
4.6.1 General description	147
4.6.2 The documentary research	149
4.6.3 The cultural profile questionnaire	150
4.6.4 The semi-structured interview	152
4.7. Data analysis method	156
4.7.1 Analysis of the informants´ cultural profile	157
4.7.2 Analysis of the favourite management reports	168
4.7.3 Analysis of the overall information collected through the interviews	169
4.8. Ethics	170
4.9. Quality paradigms ensuring reliability and validity of the research	172
4.10 Conclusions	176
PART III – FINDINGS	179
Chapter 5: Findings – Introduction	181
5.1 Structure of the findings	181
5.2 Cultural profile of informants	182
5.2.1 Germans	182
5.2.2 Italians	185
5.2.3 Germans vs. Italians	188

5.3 Structure and content of the favourite management reports submitted by the informants	192
5.3.1 Most favourite sales management reports of German informants	192
5.3.2 Most favourite sales management report of Italian informants	195
5.3.3 Sales management reports: preferences of Germans vs. preferences of Italians	198
5.4 Conclusions	199
Chapter 6: Interpretation of Management Reports	201
6.1 Introduction	201
6.2 Degree of subjective interpretation	202
a. Gut- driven decisions	202
b. Interpretation freedom	207
c. Data-persons priority	211
6.3 Trustworthiness of data source	216
a. Importance of source trustworthiness	217
b. Subjective evaluation of the reliability of reported data	221
6.4 Goals of company management reports	224
6.5 Conclusions	229
Chapter 7: Management Reports as Decision Support Tools	233
7.1 Introduction	233
7.2 Usefulness of management reports as decision support tools	234
7.3 Contribution of management reports to problem detection and framing	242
7.4 Contribution of management reports to problem solving	254
7.5 Conclusions	262
Chapter 8: Management Reporting features	265
8.1 Introduction	265
8.2 Form of the report	266
8.3 Information layout	273
8.4 Content of the report	281
8.5 Conclusions	292
PART IV – CONCLUSIONS	295
Chapter 9: Inductive Reasoning Based on the Narrative Findings	297
9.1 Introduction	297
9.2 Impact of the national culture on the individual interpretation of company management reports	298
9.3 Impact of the national culture on the usage of the company management reports as decision support tools.	300

9.4 Impact of the national culture on the individual evaluation of the efficiency and effectiveness of CMRs´ features.	302
9.5 The role of company management reports in the decision making process of Germans and Italians	305
9.6 The ideal features of company management reports fulfilling the expectations of Germans and Italians	306
9.7 A critical analysis of the main studies clustering national cultures, in the light of our findings	308
Chapter 10: Beyond the Research Goals: Influence of Social Determinants of the Business Decision Making Process on the Individual Content-Context Orientation	311
10.1 Introduction	311
10.2 The social determinants impacting our model	312
10.3 The dynamics in our model	313
10.4 Conclusion	317
Chapter 11: Limits of the Present Study and Future Steps	319
11.1 Introduction	319
11.2 Limits of the present study	319
11.3 Future steps	322
BIBLIOGRAPHY	325
ATTACHMENTS	339